Milly and Molly thought all hens had feathers.

Until one day they found a hen without her feathers.

“Come on, Feather,” Milly coaxed gently.
“Feather?” questioned Molly under her breath. “She doesn’t have feathers.”

“Shush,” whispered Milly. “We haven’t noticed that she doesn’t have feathers... right?”

“I think we need to talk to Farmer Hegarty,” said Molly.

“Why doesn’t Feather have feathers?” they whispered.

“The underlying morals inherent within the texts are important for children of the twenty-first century to take as their own... the language used to carry the stories is lively and exciting for young readers... the language and style is simply good literature... suitable as teaching texts in social studies or health programs anywhere in the world where difference is an integral component of a community”
